The Election Day Voter Polls were conducted among persons who had just voted in the 1982 General Election. Voters were interviewed with a self-administered questionnaire only after they left the polls. Between 2,200 and 3,000 voters were interviewed at between 76 and 100 locations in each of the 13 statewide samples. Sample precincts were drawn in accordance with a probability sample design that gave all voters, as well as all areas within sampling units, a properly proportionate chance to be included.
