[20] In 2005 and Americans Discuss Social Security trend, first response option read "Avoiding any tax increases for workers and employers." In February 2005 question began "When decisions about Social Security's future are being made, which do you think is more important?" For surveys in May 1999, February 1999, and August 1998, question was asked as part of a list and began "People have different opinions about how the Social Security system might be changed for the future. We'd like your opinion on what policymakers' priorities should be when they are making decisions about Social Security's future."
